About the Conference

21st century has witnessed speeded globalisation and compelled interdependence of nations that lead to social, political, economic, racial, cultural and climate crises. Covid-19 pandemic has further exacerbated the crises in an unprecedented way. Education has been the main contrivance and a central preoccupation of every country which enabled to solve these problems. But these challenges have adversely affected to the whole education system as well which needs immediate attention to replace outmoded ideas with fresh approaches. And teachers are the vital human resource to put this idea into practice and enable the people to face these crises. The time has come, if the education has to serve as a powerful force to meet the challenges of these crises, then the teachers should emerge as highly competent, culturally balanced, secular and research oriented, so that they can sail the ship out of the troubled water and menace of pandemic immediately. It needs collective efforts from various agencies, but teachers being the path makers should accept the responsibility to prepare themselves for professional ethics by self-determination and self-efforts for the academic excellence so that we can move towards reimagining and creation of new systems that help in viewing new opportunities as a ray of hope to meet these crises.
